Symphony Society Plays Saint-Saens Animal Fantasy

Kremer Interprets Songs in Carnegie Hall.

By W. J. HENDERSON.

Camille Saint-Saens was a wag. He osed away back in 1886 or 1887 a piece for instruments called "Le Carnisoon after its composition it was given in Paris for the benefit of the violinist, Lebouc. Subsequently it was done only in private till after the composer's death, when it was found that his will permitted unrestricted performance. Gabriel Pierne produced it at a Colonne concert in Paris on February 25 of this year. It was heard for the first time here at the opening concert of the Symphony Society, Walter Damrosch conductor, in Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon.

The composition is written for two pianos, which are the chief agents in publishing the musician's ideas, and for two violins, viola, cello bass, flute, piccolo, clarinet, harmonica and xylophone. Yesterday sill the strings of the orchestra were used. Rene Pollain, assistant conductor of the orchestra, directed the performance, while Walter Damrosch (who long, long ago did not dare to become a pupil of Lisst) and Leopold Mannes, his nephew, played the planos.

The composition is just a running praised by ludges in all courts in this control work and has held its lead in central New York. His classes were praised by ludges in all courts in this control work and has held its lead in central New York. His classes were pupil of Liszt) and Leopold Mannes, his nephew, played the planos.

The composition is just a running series of sketches of animals, which are musically characterized by rhythmic and instrumental imitations of their movements or their utterances. The list selected by the distinguished master is delicious in itself. This is it: "Introduction and royal march of the lions, bens and roosters, wild asses, turtles, elephants, kangaroos, aquarium, gentlemen with long ears, the cuckoo in the woods, the bird house, planists, fossils, the swan; finale, a general powwow in which

The sweet swan song every one knows. The fiddlers and the cellists have played it—rarely so beautifully as Luelen Schmit played it yesterday—and Pavlova has danced it. There was musical beauty in this, in the cuckoo episode and in the scintiliating aquarium. The audience had a good time. So did Uncle Walter Damrosch at the first piano and Nephew Leopold Mannes at the second. This piece of musical fooling ought to be heard again.

The other numbers on the program were the second symphony of Brahms. Vivaldi's A minor concerto for strings, arranged with the taste and judgment of Sam Franko, and Liszt's first Hungarian rhapsody.

Miss Isa Kremer, officially described as an "international bafladigt," made her debut at Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon. She is Russian, has aroused emotions in numerous cities east of the Expires at Mother's Home, West emotions in numerous cities east of the Atlantic and has swept across central Europe like an airplane, dropping assorted lyrics as she flew. Her performance, for such it is, can be presented to the reader in a few words. She is not primarly a singer, but is rather a lyric elecutionst who uses folk songs as her wedding. as her medium.
